

Encyclopedia of World Geography

THE EARTH

Earth is the third planet from the Sun. It is the only planet in our Solar System with the right conditions to support living things. The closest natural object to the Earth is the Moon, which is about 384,400km (240,250 miles) away.

Factories like this one release harmful chemicals into the air, poisoning the Earth's environment.

Life on Earth

The Earth's distance from the Sun means that it has just the right amount of heat and light for life to flourish. Its combination of gases enables plants, animals and people to breathe, and it is warm enough for water to exist as a liquid. All of these things are essential for life on Earth.

Earth in danger

As the number of people on Earth grows, we use more land, and our motor vehicles and industries release an increasing amount of waste, or pollution. This damages the environment: the land, oceans and the air we breathe. It is essential that we start taking more care of the Earth, before it is too late.

This is a satellite photograph of the Earth taken from space. You can see the shapes of North America and the north of South America.
